P R E F A C E .

IT was suggested by the Archaeological Department that the occasion of the Coronation Durbar of December 1910 would be a unique opportunity for the gathering together on loan of many articles to which the general public had not hitherto had access. All the exhibits, it was thought, should have some intimate connection with the history of Delhi, its rulers, or its famous characters.

Nearly 1,000 exhibits were sent on loan from all parts of India, Mr. J. P. Thompson, I.C.S., being responsible for the collection of many from Delhi, while the Honorary Secretary took advantage of a visit to Rajputana to collect many objects from native states. Two hundred and fifty exhibits were lent by the Delhi Museum of Archaeology, while the Lahore Museum, the local Government of the Punjab and many private owners also contributed to the collection. The names of the lenders of each exhibit have been given hereafter, wherever possible. On the representation of the Director General of Archaeology, Rs. 4,000 were granted by the Government of India for the expenses of the Exhibition, and a local committee of the following gentlemen were selected :—

HONORARY SECRETARY :

GORDON SANDERSON, Esquire, Superintendent, Muhammadan and British Monuments, Northern Circle, and Hon. Curator, Delhi Museum of Archaeology.

At the suggestion of Sir Louis Dane, His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, who throughout took an active interest in the Exhibition, the Muntāz Mahal in the Delhi Fort (see Plate X a) was chosen to house the Exhibition. Rs. 13,913 were spent on the conservation of the building¹ (it had been used till then as a Sergeants' Mess), and Rs. 2,000 were spent on cases and cabinets for the exhibits.

¹See Annual Progress Report, 1911-1912, of Superintendent, Muhammadan and British Monuments, Northern Circle p. 25.

Two thousand one hundred and ninety-six people visited the Museum, proceeds from entrance fees, etc., amounting to ₹1,448-2, while ₹371 were realised from the sale of catalogues. The actual expenses were not so much as anticipated, and only amounted to ₹3,337-1-10. Their Imperial Majesties the King and Queen visited the Exhibition with their suite on the afternoon of the Royal Garden Party of December 12th, 1911, and examined the collection, being received by Sir Louis Dane, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.

The Museum closed at the end of March 1912, and, it being considered that some more permanent record of the collection, many of the articles of which might never again be seen by the public, was necessary, this volume has consequently been prepared.

A catalogue of the Exhibition was prepared by Mr. J. P. Thompson, I.C.S., who was placed on special duty in this connection by the Punjab Government, and the notes accompanying the Plates hereafter are taken therefrom. The numbers, given with each exhibit, are those of the Exhibition catalogue, a few unsold copies of which may still be obtained from the Honorary Secretary.

Especial thanks are due to Khan Bahādur Mir Nāsir Ali Khan, and Khwaja Mahmud Husain of Delhi for their assistance in cataloguing the exhibits, while Maulvi Shuaib of the Archæological Department has been responsible for the transcription of the farmāns and the inscriptions on the arms and pictures.

The preparation and arrangement of the volume, with the notes on the colouring of the pictures, are the work of Mr. Gordon Sanderson, the Honorary Secretary, assisted by Maulvi Zafar Hasan of the Archæological Department.

SECTION I.—ARMS AND ARMOUR.

NOTE.—A. I. M. (see footnote)—Army of the Indian Moghuls, by W. Irvine, late Bengal Civil Service.
London, Luzac & Co., 1903.

PLATE I.

A. 1. COLLECTION OF 15 SABRES. (The word 'sabre' is here used throughout for all curved, cutting swords.)

Names of the various parts of the sword are:—Teghah, blade, uḡbah, furrows on blade, qabzah, hilt, jānuarā (?), sarṇāl, or muhāl, and tahāl, metal mountings of scabbard, kamsāl (the belt ?),¹ bandhar (?).

The quality, or temper of a blade, was its āl, (water), the term for the "watering" of a blade being jānhar.²

Another name for the belt was hamāl.³ The words used to denote swords in general were tahār (Hindī), tegh, shamsher (Persian), and occasionally saif (Arabic).

The word shamsher, "when used with a more specific meaning, was applied to the curved weapon familiar to us as the oriental sword, or, as it is frequently called, the scimitar. It is purely a cutting weapon, as its shape and the small size of its grip sufficiently demonstrate."⁴ Flexibility was not required, and the steel used was harder and took a finer cutting edge than that used in the west. It was also proportionately more brittle. The word "scimitar" is probably a corruption of shamsher.

Lent by the Delhi Museum of Archaeology.

(b)

A. 2. COAT OF MAIL (Zirih).

The cuirass, etc. (Chahār āṭmah) were sometimes worn over this zirih.

Lent by Mr. Imre Schwaiger, of Delhi.

A. 3. STRAIGHT SWORD (khanḡal), with spiked pommel.

These swords, as will be seen from the old pictures, e.g. C. 153, Plate XXXVIII b and C. 255a Plate LIV d, were not worn with a sword-belt like the sabre, but were carried in the hand in a sheath. (See also note on A. 45, Plate III d.)

Lent by the Heir-Apparent of Bhopal.

A. 4. STRAIGHT SWORD widening towards the point.

Lent by the Delhi Museum of Archaeology.

A. 5. DAGGER (Katār or jānḡhar).

Blade chiselled in low relief, with representation of fighting elephants. The blades of these daggers were generally straight, but their most striking characteristic is the 'H' shaped hilt.

Lent by Mr. Imre Schwaiger, of Delhi.

A. 6 and 7. SWORD-STICKS. Gupḡ (concealed) is the term applied to sword-sticks.

Lent by the Delhi Museum of Archaeology.

A. 8. SHIELD (Dhāl or Sipar), of steel with recurved edges, gilt bosses with cut steel borders, and inner edge of raised border decorated with trefoil design, cut in the steel. "A shield was inseparable from the sword as part of the horseman's equipment. It was carried on the left arm, or when out of use, slung over the shoulder. . . . They were of steel or hide, generally from 17 to 21 inches in diameter."¹

(c)

A. 13, 14. BOWS (Kamān).

The first two are of the lacquered wood, and bear the motto, "May the result be fortunate," i.e., "May the arrow find its mark." They have still their old strings (zih or chillah), of gut, whipped round with strands of silk. The bow was the favourite weapon of the Moghul horsemen.

Lent by the Lahore Museum.

A. 17 is a bow unstrung. It was used by the grandfather of the present Nawab of Pataudi, during the Mutiny on the side of the British, and together with the fourteen arrows (tir), below, were lent by Nawab Muhammad Ali Khan of Pataudi.

Mr. Irvine quotes another instance of the use of the bow during the mutiny.²

A. 28. COAT OF MAIL (zirih), with decorated leather collar.

Lent by Mr. Imre Schwaiger of Delhi.

A. 29. PEAR-SHAPED HELMET (tōp, khōd or dabulqah), with arrow-head spike, porte-aigrettes, and sliding nose guard, decorated with gold inlay.

Lent by the Gwalior Museum.

A. 30. AFGHAN KNIFE (Kard).

Lent by the Lahore Museum.

(d)

A. 35 and 36. CAVALRY PISTOLS of English manufacture, dated 1808 and 1820 respectively. These weapons were known as Sher-bachah (tiger-cub), and seem to have been introduced into India by Nādir Shah or Ahmad Shah Durrāni, about the middle of the 18th century. One has a flint lock. The lock of the other one must have been converted, as percussion locks were unknown in 1808.

Lent by H. H. the Maharajah Scindia of Gwalior.

A. 38. DAGGER. The jumbiyah or Arab dagger, largely worn by the Arab soldiers who served in the Deccan.

Lent by Mr. Imre Schwaiger of Delhi.

A. 39. STRAIGHT SWORD (Khānda), with spiked pommel.

Lent by Delhi Museum of Archæology.

A. 41. SMALL SHIELD of leather with four metal bosses.

A. 42. STRAIGHT SWORD (Khānda). This specimen has no spike on the pommel. The blade broadens towards the point, and is strengthened at the back.

Lent by the Delhi Museum of Archæology.

A. 43. DAGGER-STICK (Guplī-kārd).³

A. 41 and 43 lent by the Delhi Museum of Archæology.

A. 44. QUIVER (tarkash), ARROWS (tir) and ARMGUARD (godhu), worn on the left arm to protect it from being bruised by the string. A quiver like this was worn attached to a waist-belt. This specimen is of scarlet cloth embroidered with gold thread. (See C. 162, Plate XLVIII.)

A. 22. STRAIGHT SWORD (Khanda), with hilt inlaid with gold.Spiked pommel and knuckle-guard. (See note on A. 45, Plate III*d*.)

A. 21 and 22 lent by the Delhi Museum of Archaeology.

A. 23. The same.

Lent by the Delhi Museum of Archaeology.

A. 24. GOLDEN SCABBARD of A. 21, with floral design in relief.

A. 25. SABRE, with broad blade, heavy hilt, with circular pommel and cross-guard, inlaid with gold. These broad-bladed sabres are known as teghah; the back of the blade bears the following inscription in poor nasta’liq:—

این تیغه کمر اشجع جنگ شیخ حبیب الله بکتر پوش است

“This scimitar, which is girded to the loins, belonged to Ashja-i-jang, Shaikh Habībullāh, the armour clad.”

Lent by Nawab Muhammad Ali Khan of Pataudi, and used by his grandfather on the side of the British during the Mutiny.

A. 26. SABRE, inlaid silver hilt, with cross-guard, circular pommel and knuckle-guard; the blade narrows in the middle, and broadens again towards the point.

On the right side of the blade is the following inscription from the Korān:—

ماشاء الله ولا حول ولا قوة الا بالله العلي العظيم [حسبنا الله و نعم الوكيل]²

“What God wills! There is no power nor strength except in God the high, the great. God is all-sufficient and a good Protector.”

A. 19. SABRE, inlaid with gold.

On the top of the hilt is carved the 'Bismillah' ("in the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate"). On the hilt and the blade are the following texts from the Korān:—

On the top of the hilt—

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم لشكر الله محمد على
الله محمد علي عمر
الله الله الله الله

Translation:

"In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. The Army of God, Muhammad (and) 'Alī. Allāh, Muhammad, Alī (and) Umar. Allāh, Allāh, Allāh, Allāh."

Below the top—

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم انا فتحنا لك فتح مبين

"In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. Verily we opened for you a sure victory."¹

On the hilt—

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم نصر من الله فتح قريب

"In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate.

Help from God [and] coming victory."

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم حواله من كل فج عميق

"In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. Round it [people come] from every quarter."²

On the right side of the hilt—

الله ١٠٥٥

"Allah 1055 A. H." (1645 A. D.)

On the right and left sides of the blade—

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم انم ذلك الكتاب لا ريب فيه هدى للمتقين الذين يؤمنون بالغيب
و يقيمون الصلوة و مما رزقنهم ينفقون و الذين يؤمنون بما انزل اليك و ما انزل من قبلك

A. 151. SABRE with silver hilt, decorated and strengthened blades, and green leather scabbard.

It bears the following Persian inscriptions in nastālīq character :—

On the right side of the blade—

معز الدوله معز محمد خان بهادر فتح جنگ ۳۵۱۳

“Mu‘izzu-d-daulah Mu‘izz Muhammad Khān Bahādur Fath Jang 3513.”¹

On the left side of the blade—

A. 161. SABRE with modern gold inlaid hilt.

The blade bears the following inscription :—

شاهنشاه انبیا محمد

عمل حاجی اکبر شیرازی سنه ۸

“The Emperor of prophets is Muhammad.

“The work of Hājī Akbar of Shirāz. “The year ۸.”²

A. 162. SABRE with silver hilt, long and slightly curved.

The maker's name appears to be Asad-ullāh of Isfahan.

A. 163. SABRE with gold-inlaid hilt.

Bears the following inscription on the right side of the blade :—

شاه عباس

بنده ولایت

“Shāh ‘Abbās, the slave of the sanctity of ‘Alī.”

A. 164. SABRE with gold-inlaid hilt.

A. 161-1. Lent by Thakur Kesri Singh of Jaipur.

A. 173. Straight sword with gold inlaid hilt and leather silver-mounted scabbard. The sword is of an unusual pattern, broad and short.

Lent by Captain Lyon, 12nd Deoli Regiment.

² Probably refers to the year of accession of some king.

(c)

A. 31, 32. BLACK VELVET HELMET AND QUILTED COAT, decorated and strengthened with brass nails.

The quilted coat was known as chilta, and when decorated in this way as chilta hazār mekha, i.e., 'the chilta with a thousand nails.' It was worn over the armour, or alone. The helmet (tōp) bears the prayer to Ali which so frequently appears on arms and armour.

Lent by H. H. the Maharajah of Alwar.

A. 45. STRAIGHT SWORD (Khānda), with gold inlay. The khānda was the national sword of Orissa, and on the other side of India, was known by the name of Parangī, which seems to indicate that it was introduced there by the Portuguese. The blade was sometimes strengthened, as in this and other examples. It was a favourite weapon of accomplished swordsmen of cavalry and often carried by men of rank.¹

A. 46-47. FERRARA BLADES of bright flexible steel. No. 46 bears the legend, "Andrea Ferrara," and No. 47, "Ferrara." The name of Ferrara is peculiarly associated with Scottish blades, and appears to have originally belonged to a Venetian maker, or family of makers, towards the end of the 16th century. The hilts, too, are European, that of No. 46 being the regular Scotch basket type. Lent by the Heir-Apparent of Bhopal.

A. 48. SABRE, with silver hilt (A. 49) of European make. Velvet scabbard with silver mounts. Lent by the Heir-Apparent of Bhopal.

A. 50. STRAIGHT BLADE, with strengthened back and base. Lent by the Heir-Apparent of Bhopal.

A. 51. STRAIGHT SWORD (Khānda) with spiked pommel, and velvet scabbard (A. 52).

A. 53. SABRE, pistol-handled hilt of jade and gold inlay, with knuckle-guard. Velvet scabbard with silver mounts (A. 54). Made by Asad-ullāh.

On the right side of the blade is inscribed—

يا قاضي الحاجات
عمل اسد الله

"O supplier of needs."

"The work of Asad-ullāh."

A. 55. TWO EDGED STRAIGHT SWORD (Khānda), with silver-inlaid hilt. Lent by the Heir-Apparent of Bhopal

A. 56. DAGGER (Katār or jāmdhar), with gold-inlaid hilt and velvet sheath with gold-inlaid mounts.

Lent by the Lahore Museum.

A. 57-61. SPEARS.

There are numerous local names for the lance, among the best known being nezh, bhālō and barchhak. All the lances in this group as well as those in Plate II, have wooden or bamboo shafts, but steel shafts were common, especially among the Marāthas. The cavalry lance, as some of the pictures show, was not held in rest, but lifted above the head at arm's length. Nos. 58—61 (Plate III*7*), 63, 64, 67, 68, 71, 72 and 76 (Plate II*7*) all have heads of a similar type, long, narrow, 3 or 4 sided and barbed. No. 73 (Plate II*7*) has no barbs. The remainder have all broad heads. Nos. 65 and 74 have a cross bar of steel, below the base of the blade. In No. 57 the base angles of the blade end in scrolls.

The following is taken from Mr. Irvine's note on spears :—

“ The usual generic term used for spears of all kinds was the Arabic word sinān, the head or point being called sunāin.....and the butt was the buṇāin. The neẓāh, or lance, was so prominent a part of the Marāṭha equipment, that one writer Mhd. Qāsim, Aurangābādī (Aḥwāl-ul-Khawāqīn, fol. 201*a* and elsewhere), instead of the usual “ accursed enemy ” (ghaṇīm-i-b'ā-īm) calls them neẓāh-bāzān, “ lance wielders.” He thus describes, fol. 205*b*, their mode of using the lance : “ They so use it that no cavalry can cope with them. Some 20,000 to 30,000 lances are held up against their enemy, so close together as not to leave a span between their heads. If horsemen try to ride them down, the points of the spears are levelled at the assailants and they are unhorsed. While the cavalry are charging them, they strike their lances against each other, and the noise so frightens the horses, that they turn round and bolt.”¹

PLATE IV.

A. 78. SABRE, and leather scabbard (A. 79), with chased silver mounts.

On the right side of the blade is inscribed—

عباس بنده ولایت

“Abbās, the slave of (the King of) Sainthood.” Abbās was king of Persia (1588—1629 A. D.), and ‘the King of Sainthood’ is ‘Alī, the son-in-law of the Prophet. This legend is often found on the blades of the famous sword-maker, Asad-ullāh of Isfahān, who flourished during his reign.

Lent by Mirza Ahmad Sāid Khan of Delhi.

A. 105 d to g. THE SADDLE, BRIDLE, MARTINGALE AND CRUPPER of the Rajput hero, Maharāna Partāb Singh of Udaipur (1572—1597 A.D.) The leather straps are decorated and strengthened with bosses and plates of gilded filigree ironwork, and the high fronted saddle is protected with pierced and gilded metal plates, with a dragon design, adorned with a few turquoise. Underneath the saddle are four metal plates in the same style. The dragons are repeated in the stirrup leathers. The bit is a plain snaffle.

The helmet, coat of mail, and spear of Partāb Singh, were also lent by his descendant, H. H. the present Maharāna. Partāb Singh lived in the time of Akbar. He met with a severe defeat at the hands of Mān Singh of Amber, who was commanding the imperial troops, in 1576, and had made up his mind to abandon his kingdom and found a new one on the banks of the Indus. The generosity and patriotism of his minister, Bhīm Sāh, however, supplied him with the necessary funds at the critical moment, and he returned and renewed the struggle with such success that after a few years he had recovered almost the whole of his kingdom.

PLATE VI.

A. 151. EMBROIDERED QUILTED COAT (chilbi, dag'at) and HELMET. These are described as tash'uri in the Bikaner list. The piece, protecting the back of the neck, is much ampler than in the other examples.

Lent by H. H. the Maharajah of Bikaner.

b)

A. 152—157. DAGGERS (katār or jamdhar), No. 155 is set with rubies. The rest are enamelled. Their sheaths are of velvet or flowered cloth, with enamelled mountings.

Lent by H. H. the Rajah of Chamba.

c)

A. 170. DAGGER, with doubly curved blade, pistol-shaped haft of agate, and sheath with pierced gold mountings. This is the khanjūr, or Turki dagger. Our word, "hanger" is derived from khanjūr.¹

Lent by Thakur Kesri Singh, of Jaipur.

A. 165. DAGGER (peshqabz or chhurī), with parrot-head haft and enamelled sheath.

Lent by H. H. the Rajah of Chamba.

A. 171. DAGGER (peshqabz or chhurī), with arabesque decoration in low-relief.

The blade bears the legend, "the work of Muhammad, the meanest of men."

Lent by Mr. Imre Schwaiger, of Delhi.

A. 168. DAGGER, with pistol-shaped haft of jade, inlaid with silver. It is said that Ghulām Kādir, who blinded the Emperor Shāh Ālam, was finally despatched after days of torture with this khanjūr.

Lent by H. H. the Mahārājah Scindhia of Gwalior.

A. 167. DAGGER (peshqabz or chhurī), with horse-head haft of jade, and sheath with gilded mountings.

Lent by H. H. the Maharajah Scindhia of Gwalior.

A. 172. DAGGER (Katār), with velvet sheath.

PLATE VII.

A. 182. SABRE, with gold-inlaid hilt and velvet scabbard. The blade narrows in the middle.

On the right side of the blade is the following inscription in naskh character:—

ما شاء الله لا حول ولا قوة الا بالله العلي العظيم حسبنا الله ونعم الوكيل

“What God wills! There is no power nor strength, except in God, the high, the great God is all-sufficient and a good protector.”

On the left side of the blade—

يا قاضي الحاجات

“O supplier of needs!”

Lent by the Heir-Apparent of Bhopal.

A. 189. SABRE, inlaid in gold; bone and gold-inlaid pistol-hilt and velvet scabbard with gold-inlaid mounts.

On the right side of the blade the following is inscribed, in bad naskh characters:—

ذوالفقار شاه عباس

“Dhu-l-faqār¹ of Shāh Abbās.”

There are also two more illegible inscriptions.

On the scabbard is an invocation to Ali.

Lent by H. H. the Maharajah Seindhia of Gwalior.

A. 183. SABRE, with saw-edge, gold-inlaid blade and silver-inlaid hilt.

The right side of the blade bears the following inscriptions in gold letters (nasta'liq characters):—

عمل اسد الله اسفهانى

“The work of Asad-ullāh of Isfahān,”

Two of the four words are wrongly spelled. اسد should be spelled with س and اسفهانى with ص.

Lent by the Lahore Museum.

A. 184. SABRE.

The blade bears the following inscription in naskh characters:—

يا قاضي الحاجات

عمل اسد الله

“O supplier of needs!”

“The work of Asad-ullāh.”

A. 183*a*. SMALL MATCHLOCK GUN, decorated with gold inlay. It is exceptionally light, and in its day must have been considered a dainty little weapon.

It formerly belonged to Mahārājah Ranjīt Singh, the “Lion of the Punjab,” (1790-1839 A. D.)

Lent by H. H. the Mahārāj-Rāna of Dholpur.

(b)

A. 189. HEAVY STRAIGHT SWORD, hilt with cross-guard and circular pommel. This sword bears an inscription shewing that it once belonged to Mahārājah Bakht Singh of Jodhpur.

A. 190. HEAVY SWORD WITH LEAF SHAPED BLADE.

This sword once belonged to Mahārājah Ajit Singh of Jodhpur, who reigned from 1678—1724 A. D., and was murdered by his sons Abhai Singh and Bakht Singh.

The former succeeded him, and when he died in 1750 A. D., his son Rām Singh was ousted by Bakht Singh, who was himself murdered, in turn, by means of a poisoned robe given to him by his aunt.

This sword, like A. 189, is probably a "sword of state" (dhārī). (Also see Plate XI*u*.)

A. 192. PISTOL DAGGER, gilt; sheath, with perforated gold mountings

There is a percussion pistol on either side of the katōr. (Cf. A. 191. Plate VIII*e*.)

A. 189, 190, 192 lent by H. H. the Mahārājah of Jodhpur.

(c)

A. 130. DAGGER CRUTCH (Gupṭī-āsā), inlaid with silver.

These were used for leaning on, when in a sitting posture.

Lent by Mr. Imre Schwaiger, of Delhi.

A. 131. EIGHT-BLADED MACE (Gur). (Cf. Plate X*c*).

The shaft is of steel and the head of brass.

Lent by Mr. Imre Schwaiger, of Delhi.

A. 134. COAT OF MAIL, with breast pieces (zirih-baktar or bagtar).

Lent by H. H. the Mahārājah Scindhia of Gwalior.

(d)

A. 90. SABRE, with pistol-handled hilt, with cross-guard inlaid with gold. The steel mounts of the leather scabbard (A. 91) are also inlaid with gold.

The sword bears on its right side the following inscription in nashh and nast'aliq :—

لافتح [فتى] الا على لا سيف الا ذوالفقار

"There is no youth brave save 'Alī and no sword save Dhu-l-faqār." (See footnote 1 on previous page.)

On the left side—

شمشیر خاص کمر سند ۱۱۶۰
نادر شاه درانی

"The chief sword girded to the loins of Nādir Shāh Durrānī. The year 1160." (1747 A.D.)¹

Lent by H. H. the Mahārājah of Alwar.

¹ This inscription is probably a forgery. The famous Nādir Shah was not a Durrānī.

A. 158, 159, 160. DAGGERS, with enamelled hafts.
Lent by H. H. the Rājah of Chamba.

A. 160 a. DAGGER with carved jade haft, set with rubies, and sheath of silver, with floral design in relief.

Lent by Mr. Imre Schwaiger, of Delhi.

(b)

A. 175. SABRE, gold inlaid, with cross-guard and circular pommel hilt. The inscription on the back of the blade—

هست این شمشیر خاص ثانی صاحب قرآن شاه غازی بادشاه بحر و بر شاه جهان
لا اله الا الله محمد رسول الله ۱۰۴۶

states the sword was made in 1046 H. (1636-7 A.D.), for Shāh Jahān. “Emperor of Ocean and land.” There is also the Kalimah, or Muhammadan confession of faith, “there is no God except Allāh, and Muḥammad is the prophet of God.” The hilt seems to be modern.

Lent by H. H. the Mahārājah of Alwar.

A. 174. SABRE, with silver-inlaid hilt, with cross-guard, circular pommel, and knuckle-guard. The inscription on the back of the blade, inlaid in gold—

حسب العکم ظل الله حضرت جهانگیر بادشاه تیار شد states that the sword was made by order of Jahāngir (1605—1627 A. D.), but there is also a punch mark of Shāh Jahān (1627—1658 A. D.), on the blade.
صاحب قرآن ثانی

Lent by Mirza Ahsan Akhtar (of the ex-royal family of Delhi), of Benares.

A. 178. SHORT SABRE (Zafar-takyah), with gold-inlaid hilt with cross-guard, crutch-pommel, and old leather sheath. Lower half of blade wider than upper.

The Zafar-takyah used to be placed close to the Emperor, on his musnail or divān, and the handle was shaped so that the arm might rest on it.

The following inscription is inlaid, in gold nastū‘līq letters, on the back of the blade :—

... [این] ظفر تکیه که با فتح و هیبت است ... شرف از قبضه اورنگ زیب است

“... [This] Zafar-takyah which has with it victory and awe honour from the arm of Aurangzeb.”

Lent by M. Yunus Beg, of Delhi.

A. 177. SABRE, with gold-inlaid hilt and stamped leather sheath. This is another sword bearing the name of Asad-ullāh of Isfahān. On the back of the blade is inlaid in gold (nastū‘līq characters), بادشاه شاه عالم گیر ۱۱۱۰, from which it appears that the sword came into possession of Aurangzeb in 1698-9 A.D.

Lent by H. H. the Mahārājah of Alwar.

(c). A 191—196a.

(d). A 185—188a.

A. 176. SMALL SABRE, with gold-inlaid hilt and velvet sheath. The punch mark on the blade gives the name Sālīh and the date 1030 H. 1621 A. D.; on the back of the blade is a deggerel inscription inlaid in gold letters (rusta'liq character)—

این تیغ شاه زاده دارا شکو[ه] نهم کار هزار خصم بیکدم کند تمام

“This sword of the Prince named Dārā Shikoh,”

“Will slay a thou-and enemies at one blow.”

The final ‘h’ of the name is omitted, and the number of the sword, which is inlaid in Hindi, appears to be by the same hand. The sword also bears the name of Asad-ullāh, the famous Isfahānī sword maker.

Dārā Shikoh was about five when this sword was made.

Lent by H. H. the Mahārājah of Alwar.

A. 179. SABRE, with gold-inlaid and guarded hilt, globular fluted pommel, and velvet scabbard.

The punch mark reads “Ālamgīr Shāhi 1071,” which corresponds to 1661 A. D.

On the back of the blade are two lines of poetry in Persian, and two in Urdu in praise of the sword, as follows :—

Persian.

سو تیغ را چون بدست آوریم صفهایی دشمن شکست آوریم
بشمشیر من فیلهها شد دو نیم چو در بای نبل است عصای کلیم

“When we hold the handle of this sword,”

“We bring defeat to the ranks of the enemy.”

“Elephants have been cut in twain with my sword,”

“As the foot of the Nile was divided by the staff of Moses.”

Urdu.

بہرہ تیغ ہی کھیلچیکے وقت جنگ تو رستم بنی ہوجای دیکھ اسکردنگ
نکمر دیکھے بجلی بھی سنبی جملک تو بے اختیار آنکھ کودے جپک

“When this sword is drawn at the time of war,”

“Rustum (the hero of Persia) will express surprise,”

“If even the lightning were to see its gleam,”

“It would blink its eye involuntarily.”

سرکار نواب منصور علیخان بہادر سنہ 1177

On the blade is “Sarkār-i-Nawwāb Mansūr Alī Khān Bahādur. 1177.” The best known Mansūr Alī Khān was Safdar Jang, but he died in 1167 H. (1754 A. D.).

II.—STANDARDS AND INSIGNIA.

The best known of the ensigns of royalty in the east is the umbrella (chhatra). It is not peculiar to India, but is found also in the sculptures of Nineveh and Egypt. It has been thought that its use as a royal emblem was originally due to a belief that it was unlucky for the sun to shine on a person. Another ensign used for a similar purpose was the āfīlābhīr, shaped like a palm-leaf fan, and sometimes bearing the sun's face embroidered on it (sūraj-mukhī). We also find circular sun-emblems (sūraj-mukhī or āfīlābhī). This emblem of the sun's face is met with in the history of ancient Persia.

The kankabāh or qumqumāh was a ball of polished steel suspended from a long pole.

The pañjah, or outspread hand, is sometimes said to represent the hand of Alī, which Timūr is recorded to have had carried before him, as a sacred relic, but the outspread hand was used by the Romans long before the time of Muhammad.

The ensign of the Mīzān or balance had reference to the scales of justice.

The azhdahā-pāikar (dragon-face), like the pañjah, is said to originate with Timūr, who was presented with some dragon-idols in India, but the Romans too had a dragon-standard, borrowed from the Parthians, which was "the image of a large dragon fixed upon a lance, with gaping jaws of silver, and with the rest of its body formed of coloured silk. When the wind blew down the open jaws, the body was inflated."

This description of the draco or dragon-standard of the Romans is curiously like Thorn's description of the fish standard or māhī conferred on Lord Lake by Shah Ālam in 1804, which represented "a fish with a head of gilt copper and the body and tail formed of silk, fixed to a long staff and carried on an elephant." The [similarity suggests that the māhī was in origin merely a variation of the dragon. But the māhī or fish was sometimes made of brass or gilded copper throughout. Its significance is not quite clear, but it possibly represented the fish on which the world, according to the Persian mythology, rests. This world-supporting fish appears in picture C. 115, Plate XXXIX a.

The above, with the exception of the āfīlābhīr and the māhī, were the peculiar emblems of the Moghul sovereigns. The āfīlābhīr was sometimes conferred on royal princes, and the māhī was bestowed on distinguished servants of the crown, but even among them it was reserved, something like the English Garter, for those of high rank.

The term māhī-o-marātīb (lit. fish and dignities) was used collectively for the emblems of royalty, but it was also used in a special sense for the fish and certain adjuncts which were conferred on distinguished nobles.

Other ensigns which were conferred on subjects were the chhatra-tok, and the tanman-tok, yak-tail standards, which recall the horse-tail standards of the Turks, and standards with flags attached of different forms, known as the alam and the jhandu.

We read also of the sher marātīb (see A. 219, Plate XII b), and there is a tiger-standard in picture C. 355, Plate L b. There does not seem to have been any standard pattern or size for the fish or tiger-standards, and the specimen of the latter in the exhibition (A. 219) is quite a different thing from that shown in the picture.

Representations of most of the above will be found in the picture of the State-procession of Akbar II, now in the Delhi Museum of Archaeology, and in picture C. 166, Plate XLIX, and there are fine specimens of several in the Edward Museum at Bhopal.

PLATE XII.

A. 238. FISH STANDARD. Different in form from A. 230 and A. 231, Plate XIII. It consists of a gilt effigy of a fish at the top of a pole and has a long fish body attached, made of tinsel cloth. Below that are green, yellow and red drapings.

A. 239, 240. PAIR OF STANDARDS, with gilt balls at top of staff, and green, yellow and red drapings.

A. 238-240. Lent by H. H. the Mahārājah of Bikaner.

(b)

A. 241. PANJAH (see C. 355, Plate L b, and C. 508, Plate XXXVIII a).

A. 248. PANJAH, with green yellow and red drapings. The hand is here displayed against a gilded disk and it is possible that this standard is a combination of the Panjah and the Aftāb. A. 241 is the more usual form of Panjah.

A. 232. STANDARD, with gilt balls at top.

A. 219. TIGER'S HEAD (Shēr marātīb). Probably used with a flag or some hanging drapery.

A. 233. STANDARD, with gilt ball at top.

A. 245. STANDARD, with gilt disk at top of staff, and green, yellow and red drapings. This is possibly a sun emblem.

A. 244. TRIDENT of gilded metal, with velvet sheaths for the prongs, fixed at the end of a pole.

The trident is generally met with as the emblem of the Hindu deity Siva, but we find it as a Moghul ensign in C. 355, Plate L b. That however may be a mistake on the part of the artist who was probably a Hindu.

This collection of Mahār-ō-Marātīb was lent by H. H. the Mahārājah of Jodhpur.

A. 230-1. PAIR OF FISH STANDARDS.

The heads are of gilded metal and both carry small tinsel plumes. The bodies are of calico, stamped with gold, while attached to the poles below the heads are drapings, on which the scales and fins of the fish are represented. The description given in the note above of the Roman Dragon-standards applies almost exactly to these, and a pictorial representation of standards of this kind is to be seen in the picture representing Aurangzeb at the siege of Golconda (see C. 166, Plate XLIX).

"It was used for taking the altitude of sun, moon and stars : for calculating latitude : for determining the points of the compass and time : for ascertaining heights of mountains, etc., and for construction of horoscopes. The instrument was a marvel of convenience and ingenuity, and was called 'the mathematical jewel'. Nevertheless it passed out of use, because incapable of any great precision." *Encyc. The khil'ats, as they were called, were given to everyone who was presented at Court. After presentation to the Emperor, the person honoured with the khil'at retired and was clad in the vestments he had received. The khil'ats consisted of a number of pieces which varied with the importance of the person receiving them, and on rare occasions the Emperor as a special mark of favour conferred articles of dress which he had worn himself.

The elephant in the picture is adorned with a head piece very similar to those shown in the previous illustration. An elephant carriage belonging to the Maharajah of Alwar appeared at the Review of Native retainers in Lord Curzon's Darbar of 1902.

The above picture, with another like it now placed in the Taj Museum at Agra, was bought in London by the Director-General of Archaeology.

Lent by L. Sheo Parshad, of Delhi.

A. 380. ANOTHER WALKING STICK, carved in the same manner, but dated 1881 A.D. This stick was carved by Mirzā Sulamān Shāh, of the ex-royal family of Delhi.

A. 268. FARMĀN OF GHĪYĀS-UD-DĪN BALBAN, Sultān of Delhi, dated 7th Shabān, 671 H. (27th Feb. 1273 A.D.), in the 4th year of the reign.

A building site measuring four chains, which had been used by Kuwājah Haidar, had been included within the line of the walls of the royal fortress at Delhi. The farmān grants the land to Kuwājah Haidar, and his descendants.

The farmān is written in Persian. The style of writing is the ornamental nashk, such as we find in the inscriptions on the Qutb Minār, which were carved in the early part of the same century.

In the tughra, the King is styled Zīyā-ud-dunyā wad-dīn, Abū Zafar, Ghīyās-ud-dīn, Sultān. In the seal he is called Abū Zafar, Ghīyās-ud-dīn, Muhammad Bādshāh Ghazī.

On the margin are notes showing that copies had been received by the four great departments of State, the Diwān-i-adālat, the Diwān-i-ʿālā, the Diwān-i-wazārat, and the Diwān-i-sadārat. On the back is an abstract of the petition and the order passed, with the ṣāḍ (the initial letter of the word ṣahīḥ = "correct") of the official who checked it. The ṣāḍ also appears on each of the marginal notes.

If this farmān is genuine, it must be almost unique, and it is nearly four centuries older than any other in the Exhibition. But it is probably not genuine. Balban came to the throne in A.H. 664, and not in 667 or 668, and the titles given in the tughra and the seal are unusual.

(A)

A. 254. This document is apparently a copy of the entries in the archives relating to the grant of the dignity of 3000 zāt and 1000 sawār, and the titles of Ghauth-ud-daulah and Ghālib Jang to Ghauth Muhammad Khan, at the request of his father. These are the entries we usually find on the back of farmāns. It seems probable that, as is expressly stated in a similar document (A. 287) also shown in the Exhibition, the original farmān had been lost.

The document bears the seal of Akbār Shāh, then the Heir Apparent, and is dated 15th Jumāda II in the 34th year of Shah Ālam 1792 A.D.

Alī Qalandar.

At the top is the seal of Daulat Rao Sindhiā, and the signature of some British official who inspected the savād in 1817. The name of the Saint is too sacred to be mentioned in the body of the savād, so a blank space is left and the name written at the top.

A similar practice was observed in regard to the names of Emperors

A. 294. FARMAṆ recording that Muḥammad Akbar Shāh II conferred the title of "Nāṣiru-d-daula Bahādur Ghālib Jang" on Colonel James Skinner (see C. 258, Plate LXIX). It is written in very careful handwriting. On the right side of the farmān we find an impression of the seal of the above-mentioned king. It is circular, with a decorative border of conventional flowers. A parasol¹ overshadows the seal, which contains the name

A. 287. LETTER FROM GENERAL PERRON (see C. 259) to Rājah Sāhib Singh of Patiala, dated 21st Ramazān 1216 H. (1802 A.D.). The letter is called a qarḥnāmāh. In it General Perron allies himself with the Rājah, and the Rājah would be expected to send a similar communication to the General.

The General takes Christ to witness that he will abide by the agreement, but, as in the case of A. 285 (see Plate XXIIIa), the name of Christ is written above, and a blank is left in the text.

The envelope is pinned at the top.

It is difficult to say what the letters are in the signature at the foot of the letter. They might be read as "C. S. Perron," "C[onte] or C[olonel] or G[eneral] de Perron."

A. 258. LETTER FROM MAJOR LOUIS BOURQUIN to Atā-ullāh Khān and Wazīr Khān, rebuking them for not having joined him, and telling them that they must have heard of the defeat of the enemy, the capture of his guns, and his flight to Hānsi. The writer states his intention of pursuing him and besieging him there, and adds that if Atā-ullāh Khān and Wazīr Khān bring a portion of the instalments of money due from them, the agreement made with the General (Perron) will be carried out to the letter. If however, they delay and do not send their agents before the army reaches Hānsi, they will be dealt with as seems fitting.

This letter must have been written after the defeat of George Thomas (see C. 256, Plate LXIX b) at Jahāzgarh, and his flight to Hānsi and before Bourquin's advance in pursuit of him.

The envelope bears the seal of Bourquin. The date must be some time in the autumn of 1801. Atā-ullāh Khān was the chief of Maler Kotla and Wazīr Khān was his nephew.

SECTION V.—SPECIMENS OF THE ART OF CALLIGRAPHY.

It is difficult for Europeans to understand that among Muhammadans in the East calligraphy takes rank far above the arts of painting and architecture. Painting was a hereditary occupation, and it would not be an unfair comparison to say that painters were generally regarded much as photographers are nowadays regarded in the West. The Leonardos and the Titians of the East were the great masters of calligraphy, men like Mir Alī, Imād, and Abd-ur-rashīd. Masterpieces by men such as these were collected by kings, and even their moḥq, or exercises (A. 318—9) were eagerly sought after, much in the same way as sketches by the great masters of painting are sought after in the West. A story is told of Mir Panjāh-kash that on one occasion he went out to make some purchases. When he had got what he wanted, he found that he had forgotten his purse, and could not pay in money, but a pen and paper were put into his hand and each letter he wrote was accepted as a rupee. A similar story is told of other masters, and tradition records instances in which artists were remunerated at the rate of a gold moḥq a letter.

The nasṭalīq style in which almost all the exhibits are written was evolved by the Persians. It is a much rounder and more flowing style than the Arabic shāḥ and lent itself readily to artistic treatment. It was by far the most popular style of writing in India, and the shāḥ style is reserved almost exclusively for the Qurān and religious works written in Arabic.

Another style frequently met with in India in the shikastah or broken style, in which abbreviations are used. Its beauties are more difficult to appreciate than those of the nasṭalīq, and it is often difficult to read, but it can be written much more rapidly than the nasṭalīq, in which almost every letter takes an appreciable time to form.

There are rules laid down for the proportions of the different letters, their alignment, the sweep of the curves, etc., which are not difficult to understand, but mastery of them will not make the calligraphist. Infinite patience, a perfect hand, and instinct for beauty of form and finish are all required, and beyond them all there is the indescribable something which led Mir Alī to exclaim, when criticizing the writing of his master, Sultān Alī, that though, when judged by every tangible standard, it was inferior to his own, it still possessed a zest 'atṭalī lit. saltiness that he could never acquire.

It requires long experience to enable one to form a correct opinion on the merits of a specimen of writing, and much that appears beautiful to the untrained eye will be rejected at once by the expert. The letters on which most stress is laid are naturally those which figure most largely on the page, those composed of curved or of long, sweeping lines. The alignment should be perfect, and the curves of the different letters uniform throughout. There must be no slovenliness, no trace of fatigue or flagging interest from start to finish, and the last pages must be as perfect as the first.

Many of the specimens in the exhibition consist of a few lines of poetry written on a sheet of paper or a card. Much skill was often bestowed on the illumination of the borders and the interlinear spaces, which corresponds in a way to the framing of the picture or, more exactly perhaps, to the setting of a jewel.

One reason why this art has flourished in the East is to be found in the Muhammadan prohibition of representations of living things. The artistic spirit craved for satisfaction, and found it in calligraphy. That prohibition, which rests on tradition, is less strictly observed by Shī'a Muhammadans than by Sunnīs, and some of the Moghul Emperors discarded it altogether.

It is often a matter of extreme difficulty to form an opinion regarding the genuineness of a reputed specimen of a great master's work, owing to the prevalence of a practice for which, perhaps, forgery is too hard a name. A student would select some particular calligraphist as his model, and make it his endeavour so to perfect his own hand that, after years of practice, he might be able to pass off what he had himself written as the work of his master. Such specimens would bear, as a matter of course, the signature of the master.

It is perhaps unnecessary to observe that the writing is done with a reed pen and thick ink. The art is still practised, but the printing press, the steel pen, and the pressing claims of English education are slowly killing it.

A. 297. Illustrated copy of the Persian translation of the MEMOIRS of BABAR.

On the first page are impressions of the seals of Humāyūn, Akbar and others, and various entries intended to show when the book was examined or taken out of the Imperial library.

On the last page it is stated that the book was written by Mīr Alī al-kātib in accordance with the order of Prince Humāyūn in 1530 A.D. (the year of Bābur's death).

Mīr Alī al-kātib was one of the most famous of the early writers in the nasta'liq style. He was a native of Herāt, and died about 1543 A.D.

A. 303. KATĪH in praise of the prophet Muhammad, written by Ābd-ur-rashīd, one of the great masters. He was a nephew and pupil of Mīr Imād. After the murder of his uncle, he came to India, to the Court of Shah Jahān, where he was appointed instructor to Dārā Shikoh, who became proficient in the art. He died about 1672 and was buried at Agra. A petition from him to Shāh Jahān, asking permission to be allowed to retire, is found at the back of picture C. 161 (Plate XXXVI b).

(c)

A. 302. QUATRAIN, written by Ābd-ur-rahīm in 1619. Ābd-ur-rahīm was a famous calligraphist of the court of Jahāngīr, who had the title of ambarīn qalam (ambergris-pen).

(d)

A. 301. QUATRAIN, written by Mīr Imād. Mīr Imād of Kazwīn is one of the great masters. He lived the life of a faqīr, and was put to death by Shāh Ābbās of Persia (1588—1629 A.D.) on account of his Sunnī views. His writing was so highly esteemed in India that it is said that Shāh Jahān used to bestow a captain's commission on anyone who brought him a specimen of his work.

VI.—PICTURES.

Many of the pictures are of much later date than the persons they represent, but in the great majority of cases such pictures reproduce earlier portraits. Most of them bear inscriptions giving the name of the subject, but these cannot always be relied on. Where there are no inscriptions, and the identity of the subject cannot be established by comparison with other portraits, the only warrant for the descriptions given is, as a rule, the belief of the owner, which in some instances, no doubt, rests on family tradition. The study of Indian pictorial art is still in its infancy, and the dating of pictures is rendered extremely difficult by the frequency and accuracy with which old pictures are reproduced. With regard to portraits of royal ladies, Manucci gives a warning: "If anyone has produced such portraits, they should not be accepted, being only likenesses of concubines and dancing girls, etc., which have been drawn according to the artist's fancy."

C. 61. MIR JUMLAH. A favourite of the Emperor Farrukh-siyar (see C. 180, Plate LVd).

C. 4. ALEXANDER THE GREAT (356—323 B.C.).

Invaded India in 326 B.C., and spent the hot weather in the country. He crossed the Indus near Attock, defeated Porus on the Jhelam, and advanced as far as the Beās. His troops refused to go any further, and after erecting on the eastern bank the famous "Twelve Altars," he turned south and made his way through the Punjab and down the Indus to the sea.

The portrait is, of course, an imaginary one. The features are, however, distinctly European, and it would be interesting to know the origin of this painting.

PLATE XXIX.

C. 72. RAZIYYAH, SULTĀN OF DELHI (1236—1239 A.D.).

Daughter of Shams-ud-dīn Iltutmish (Altamsh), who left her in charge of the Government in preference to any of his sons, when absent on his southern campaigns. She succeeded her brother Rukn-ud-dīn. She "evinced all the qualities of a just and able sovereign," but the favour she showed an Abyssinian slave disgusted the nobility. A rising ensued, and she was defeated near Kaithal. The manner of her end is uncertain, but Ibn Batūtah says she fled away alone from the battle-field towards Delhi. She lay down to sleep in a field, wearied with her long ride, and was murdered by a rustic for the sake of her rich dress, and buried on the spot where her body was found. The tomb is still shown near the Turkman Gate of modern Delhi. She adopted male attire, and is always known by the masculine title of Sultān.

The portrait is, of course, imaginary and executed long after her time. The Queen carries a white hawk on her hand. White storks are depicted in the background, while in front is a stream in which are shown birds and fish.

Lent by the Delhi Museum of Archaeology.

(b)

C. 55. MUHAMMAD SHĀH, Moghul Emperor (1719—1748 A.D.). (Also see C. 190, Plate LVIII a, and C. 197, Plate LIX.)

Born 1702 A.D. Set up by the Sayyid "King-makers" (see C. 15, Plate LII*a*), whose power did not long survive his accession. During his reign the southern provinces of the empire were lost, and Delhi was sacked by Nādir Shāh (see C. 51, Plate XXXIII a, and C. 197, Plate LIX), in 1739, after which the power and magnificence of the empire rapidly declined. Died in 1748, a few weeks after the engagement at Sirhind in which the Durrāni king (see C. 27, Plate LIV*c*) was repulsed by his son Prince Ahmad Shāh. Buried close to the shrine of Nizām-ud-dīn Auliya at Delhi.

PLATE XXX.

C. 76. AMĪR TIMŪR (also see next plate) and the Turkish Emperor, Bāyazīd.

Painted by ‘Ālim, son of Muhammad Tālib, in the reign of Shāh ‘Ālam.

Timūr is better known to European writers as Tamerlane, which is a corruption of Timūr-i-lang (Timur the lame). Born at Kesh near Samarkand in 1336 A.D. His father was the head of the Turkī tribe of Barlās. In 1370, after ten years of fighting, Timūr established himself as an independent sovereign at Samarkand. He established himself at Samarkand and thence conquered or overran Persia, Mesopotamia, Armenia, and Kurdistan, as well as a large part of Western Turkestan. In 1398, he descended on India and sacked Delhi, then ruled over by Mahmūd, the last of the Tughlaq kings. In 1402, he overthrew the Turkish Sultān Bāyazīd (Bajazet), whom he is said to have carried about in an iron cage. After the Greek Emperor and the Sultān of Egypt had acknowledged his supremacy, he returned to Samarkand. He died in 1405, when on the point of invading China, and was buried at Samarkand. He was the ancestor of the Moghul Emperors of Delhi (1526—1857 A.D.). Doubt has been thrown on the genuineness of the memoirs which pass under his name. English contemporaries—John of Gaunt (1340—1399) and Chaucer (1340—1400).

Lent by H. H. the Maharajah of Alwar.

C. 87. AKBAR, Moghul Emperor (1556—1605 A.D.).

Son of Humāyūn and a lady of Khurāsānī descent, whom Humāyūn married shortly after his expulsion by Sher Shāh Sūr in 1540 A.D. Born at Amarkot in the Sind desert in October 1542. After Humāyūn's restoration, he was sent to the Punjab with Bairām Khān against Sikandar Sūr, and it was while he was there that news was received of the death of Humāyūn. He ascended the throne at the age of thirteen, in 1556, with Bairām Khān as Regent. The last hope of the Sūrs vanished in November of that year with the defeat and death of Hīmū at Panipat. The Moghuls owed their restoration to Bairām Khān, but he conducted himself with such haughtiness and severity that in 1560 Akbar determined to "drop the pilot." He was only seventeen and a half when he took the government into his hands. The task before him was a heavy one. He could hardly count on the loyalty even of his own followers. The non-Moghul Muhammadan chiefs throughout the country were against him, and his title was not acknowledged except in the Punjab, and the country round Delhi and Agra. Until 1567, he was principally occupied in reducing his own officers to obedience. He then turned his attention to Rajputana, and captured Chitor in 1568. From there he passed on to the annexation of Gujarat in 1572. The conquest of Bengal in 1575 plunged him in difficulties with the Afghāns of that country, which were not settled till 1592. Kashmir submitted in 1587, Sind in 1591, and Kandahār in 1594. His troops suffered a serious reverse in the campaign against the Yūsufzais in 1586, when Raja Bīr Bal (see C. 96, Plate XLVII c) was killed, and it took him thirteen years, from 1587 to 1600, to suppress the fanatical Roshaniyas in the hills to the south of Peshawar, but it may be said that by 1594, which marks the beginning of his Deccan campaigns, he had established his power north of the Narbada. The year 1594 was made memorable by the gallant defence of Ahmadnagar by Chānd Bibī, who purchased peace by the cession of Berār. The war broke out again, and in the second siege of Ahmadnagar in 1600 she was murdered by her own followers, and the city stormed. Khandesh was annexed about the same time, and peace made with the kings of Golconda and Bijapur, who had espoused the cause of Ahmadnagar. The declining years of Akbar were clouded by the revolt of Prince Salīm (Jahāngīr) (see C. 112, Plate XLII) in 1600, the murder of Abul Fazl (see C. 102, Plate XLII/7) at his instigation in 1602, and the death of Prince Dānyāl early in 1605. His own end came in the autumn of that year.

(a). C 76. Amir Timur and the Turkish Sultan Bayazid.

(b). C 87. Akbar.

(c). C 67. Mirza Salim.

According to western ideas, he was beyond compare the most enlightened of the Moghul emperors. From the first he set his face against bigotry and intolerance, and tried to conciliate all classes of his subjects. He rejected Islām, and promulgated the Dīn-i-Ilāhī, the divine Faith. He adopted and extended the land-revenue system of Sher Shāh. Among his buildings may be mentioned the Fort at Agra and Fathpur Sikri. In the Ain-i-Akbari of Abul Fazl we have a faithful record of his administration, court ceremonies, etc. He was a man of abounding physical strength and energy, and loved hunting. With all his greatness, his son tells us that he could neither read nor write. His reign was almost exactly contemporaneous with that of Queen Elizabeth (1558-1603) and he was born in the same year as Mary, Queen of Scots.

This picture is probably a most excellent and characteristic likeness of Akbar. The costume is flowered gold, and the sash richly jewelled. He is wearing a pearl necklace and bracelets, while the gold turban is also bound with a pearl circlet. He carries a jewel in his right hand, and his left hand rests on the hilt of a rich jewelled sword in a green sheath. He wears a blue-sheathed and jewelled katār (cf. A. 5, Plate V b) in his sash.

Lent by Mr. Imre Schwaiger, of Delhi.

(c)

C. 67. MIRZĀ SALIM (see C. 224a, Plate LXa), son of Akbar II. Died in his father's life-time. The custom of wearing the hair long came into fashion in the later Moghul Empire. The portrait shows unmistakeable European influence, and the artist has, perhaps unconsciously, given his subject quite European features.

(a)

C. 73. AMĪR TĪMŪR (see note on previous Plate).

The Emperor is clothed in green, with red sleeves, and is leaning against a crimson cushion. The throne, on which he is sitting, is of gold inlaid with precious stones. He is holding a crown in his right hand. There is an elaborate border to this picture.

C. 35. DĀRĀ SHIKOH (see note on C. 156, Plate LII b), and the priest LĀL DAYĀL. Dārā Shikoh was the eldest son of Shāh Jahān and Mumtāz Mahall. Born 1615 A.D. Died 1659. The history of the struggle with Aurangzeb, his defeat, his wanderings, and his death is well told by Bernier. His broad views on religion were made the pretext for putting him to death. He is buried at the mausoleum of Humāyūn. He was the author of some well-known works on subjects connected with religion.

C. 7. CHINGIZ KHĀN.

This is labelled as a portrait of Chingiz Khān (Jenghis Khān), the Mongol Emperor, the greatest conqueror the world has known. His conquests extended from the Dnieper to the Pacific Ocean. He never undertook any regular expedition against India, though in 1221 A.D. he defeated Sultān Jalālud-dīn of Khwārizm on the Indus, and sent a force across the river in pursuit of him, which ravaged portions of the western Punjab. Born 1162. Died 1227. English contemporary—King John (1167—1216).

The portrait is certainly not one of the Mongol Emperor; it may probably represent a grandee of Akbar's court who bore the same name.

C. 54. NĀDIR SHĀH (c. 1687—1747 A.D.), (also see C. 197, Plate LXIX.)

A Persian robber chief, who expelled the Afghan usurpers from Persia in 1729, and restored the Safawī dynasty, but seven years later had himself proclaimed Emperor. He conquered Afghanistan, and in 1738 invaded India. Early in the following year, he defeated Muhammad Shāh (see C. 55, Plate XXIX b) at Karnāl, and sacked Delhi (see note on C. 409, Plate LXV a), carrying away a vast booty, including the Peacock Throne and the Koh-i-nūr. After his withdrawal from India, he extended his empire northwards to the Oxus, and made Mashhad his capital. In his later years, he became gloomy and savage, and was assassinated in 1747. European contemporaries—Marshall Saxe (1696—1750), Pope (1688—1744) and Sir Robert Walpole (1676—1745).

C. 84. HUMĀY ŪN, Moghul Emperor (1530—1540 and 1555—1556 A.D.).

Born 1508. Son and successor of Bābar (see C. 20, next plate). Driven out by Sher Shāh Sūr in 1540, but returned fifteen years later. Killed by a fall down the staircase at the Sher Mandal in the Old Fort. His tomb is a mile further south. The father of Akbar (see C. 87, Plate XXX b). English contemporary—Queen Mary I (1516—1558).

The picture is a comparatively modern one and its interest chiefly centres in the elephant fight which is shown in the background. A ring of soldiers encircles the animals and "catherine wheels" (chakkars) are being used to separate them. In Manucci's account of the state elephants, he says that two men were specially told off "for the fireworks, and to assist the others if necessary."

C. 30. JAHĀNGĪR, Moghul Emperor 1605—1627 A.D. (also see C. 112, C. 110, Plates XLIIa and b; C. 501, Plate XXXVIa, and C. 508, Plate XXXVIIIa), with a hawk.

Son of Akbar (see C. 87, Plate XXXb) and a Jaipur Princess, who received the title of Maryam-uz-zamānī. Born 1569, and named Salīm, after Shaikh Salīm Chishtī, as Akbar believed that it was to the prayers of that saint that he owed the blessing of a son. He gave his father a good deal of trouble, and in 1600 made a half-hearted attempt at independence. In 1602, he procured the assassination of Abul Fazl (C. 102, Plate XLIIb), an event which affected the Emperor very deeply. In 1605, he ascended the throne, and in 1611 married Nūr Jahān. Died in 1627 and is buried at Shahdara near Lahore. Like Bābar, he left Memoirs. Sir Thomas Roe, who visited his court as ambassador of James I of England, remained in India for three and a half years (1615—1618), and has left a very interesting account of what he saw. English contemporary—James I (1566—1625).

C. 20. BĀBAR, with a hawk (also see C. 19, Plate XXXIIa).

The first Moghul Emperor of Delhi (1526—1530 A.D.). Born in 1483, the fifth in descent from Amīr Tīmūr, he succeeded his father as king of Farghāna at the age of 12. Two years later he seized Samarkand, only to lose both it and his own kingdom. Fought with varying success for many years, but ultimately had to abandon everything north of the Hindu Kush. He had seized the kingdom of Kābul in 1504, and it was from there that he launched his attacks on India. His first invasion took place in 1519, and in 1526 he defeated the Pathān Sultān of Delhi, Ibrāhīm Lodī, at Pānipat. In 1527 he overthrew the Rājput confederacy under Rāna Sanga of Chitor at Khānua, near Bharatpur. Died at Agra and was buried at Kābul. His memoirs, which have been translated into English, are most interesting. European contemporaries—Henry VIII (1491—1547), Cardinal Wolsey (1475—1530), Pizarro (1476—1541).

C. 504. JAHĀNGĪR (also see C. 30, Plate XXXIVa), and his grandson SHUJĀ', son of Shāh Jahān.

The Emperor is dressed in green, with a small surcoat of flowered gold, edged with fur. He carries a white hawk on his right hand and the bird's hood is in his left. Prince Shujā' is in crimson and carries a sword with blue scabbard. Both the turbans are orange coloured. Wild flowers are delicately portrayed in the foreground. C. 504, Plate LXXIIIb, the reverse of this picture, shows an Emperor (Shāh Jahān ?) at a lion hunt. The Emperor is just firing at the lion, which is lying in the waving grasses; his elephant is already trampling on one lion. The Emperor seems to be riding a special "shikār" elephant, its housings being comparatively simple. The haulaḥ of the other elephant, which carries the Emperor's "leader," is more splendidly attired than the larger elephant. The Emperor has probably ridden up on it to the scene of the hunt.

C. 92. THE HOLĪ FESTIVAL in the SERAGLIO of AKBAR.

The Hindū festival of the Holī takes place in the spring and is made the occasion for a great deal of horseplay and not over-refined merriment. The squirting of red water, and the throwing of red powder, play a great part in the proceedings.

The picture is certainly not contemporaneous. Several of the ladies are seen squirting the red water over their companions.

C. 117. JAHĀNGĪR AT THE JHARŌKA. (Compare C. 505 next Plate.)

The picture shows several of the most distinguished personages of the time of Jahāngīr. On the left of the spectator stand Mirzā Ābd-ur-Rahīm Khan, Khān Khānān, in orange (C. 104, Plate XLb), Sharīf Khān, son of the famous painter Ābd-us-Samad, and himself a noble of very high rank (in green), and Rāja Karan of Udaipur (in pale yellow). On the other side, beginning from the top, are Rāja Mān Singh of Amber (with gold turban), Khān-i-Āzam (in brown), who is buried in the Chausath Khambah near the shrine of Nizām-ud-dīn, Mirzā Ghiyās, the Minister, Jahāngīr's father-in-law (C. 151, Plate XLIIIa), and the father of Nūr Jahān, Shaik Farīd, a well-known commander (in maroon), and Mirzā Shāh Rukh (in white with a sword), a brother-in-law of the Emperor. The man in red is Jahāngīr Qulī Khān, Governor of Bengal.

The jharōka (lit. "showing place") is found in all the palaces of the Moghul Emperors. The Emperor used to appear daily to his subjects from some prominent part of the palace, which in consequence received this name.

The picture is attributed to Basāwan, pupil of Ābd-us-Samad, one of the most famous painters of the period. The figure of Jahāngīr and that of the man (unnamed), in the lowest left corner of the picture appear to have been touched up at a later date.

PLATE XXXVIII.

C. 508. JAHĀNGĪR AT THE JHĀRŌKA (see C. 117 previous Plate).

One of the most interesting pictures in the collection. To the left of the picture is seen the chain of bells, put up by Jahāngīr outside the palace at Agra, for the use of suppliants (also see next Plate). The arrangement of the buildings on the wall, however, does not tally with Jahāngīr's buildings at Agra, or for that matter Lahore, but the picture is interesting as showing the pierced screen that was usually placed on the outside walls of the Moghul palaces. To the left, is a pavilion with the curved "Bengali" type of roof. To the right, is a building with golden columns and resembling some form of "Audience hall," while below it three windows point to a series of underground chambers of which there is such a well-known example at Agra. The jharōka, in which the Emperor is appearing to the people gathered on the low ground below, is gilt roofed. To the left three attendants are seen bearing a panjah (see A. 241, 248, Plate XII b), and two other insignia, wrapped up in cloths. The names of those standing immediately under the jharōka are all given. Among the crowd in the foreground are noticed a Persian and an African negro. Attendants are keeping order, while musicians, with horns and cymbals, are contributing to the proceedings.

C. 115. JAHÂNGĪR AND HIS ANCESTORS.

Three angels are hovering above with crown, sword, and umbrella, emblems of sovereignty, for the house of Timūr, who is seen seated at the top of the picture, with a banner in one hand, and a sword and bow (in case) in the other. Next to him on the spectator's left is Miran Shāh Mirzā, his son, who is in turn succeeded by his son, and so on until we reach Bābar (see C. 20, Plate XXXIV*b*), the fifth in descent from Timūr (see C. 76, Plate XXX*a*). Above him is Humāyūn (see C. 84, Plate XXXIII*c*) and above him (top right-hand) Akbar (see C. 89, Plate XXXIII*d*).

In the centre is Jahāngīr (see C. 30, Plate XXXIV*a*) who has just transixed the human head with an arrow, and is preparing to discharge another. An owl (a bird of ill omen) rests on the head. Two angels are offering Jahāngīr a sceptre and more arrows. The sceptre shows the influence of the West, as it is not an Eastern emblem of royalty.

Against the shaft of the spear, on which the head is fixed, is a musket. On the other side is a repetition of the device which appears on a larger scale on the reverse. Over it stoops a bird of paradise, a bird of happy omen.

The Emperor stands on a globe, which itself rests on the horns of a bull, which in turn stands on a fish. An inscription shows that this symbolizes the perfect balance of the affairs of the world in the time of Jahāngīr.

Close to the Emperor's right foot is the golden chain of bells, which he had erected in his palace for suppliants (see note on previous Plate). On it hang the scales of justice, which appear again at the bottom of the picture, where the lion is lying down with the lamb.

On the reverse the artist has constructed his picture round an impression of the seal of the Emperor. At the top is suspended the royal umbrella, on each side of which a bird of paradise hovers. Below are the scales of justice, while on either side are Mullās praying for his long life.

C. 104. MIRZĀ ĀBD-UR-RAHĪM KHĀN, KHĀN KHĀNĀN.

Son of Bairām Khān. Born in 1556 A.D. On his father's death in 1560, Akbar took charge of him.

He became perhaps the most famous of all the grandees of the Moghul Empire. When he was only 26, he suppressed the rebellion of Sultān Bahādur in Gujarāt. Eight years later, he conquered Sind. He fought with distinction in the Deccan, and took Ahmadnagar in 1600. Under Jahāngīr, he was less successful, and the part he played in the intrigues for the succession did him little credit. He died in 1626, and was buried at Delhi, near the tomb of Humāyūn. He was a man of culture like his father, and translated the memoirs of Bābar into Persian. He was famous for his magnificent generosity.

The picture is attributed to Hāsham, a well-known painter, but these ascriptions should be regarded with some suspicion. There are notes on the picture of the colours to be used in finishing it.

C. 132. SHĀH JAHĀN, Moghul Emperor (1627—1658 A.D.) (see C. 130, Plate XLIVb, C. 136, Plate XLVa).

Born 1592. Son of Jahāngīr and Jodh Bāī. In 1614 compelled Amr Singh, Mahārāna of Mewār (Udaipur), to sue for peace, and in 1621 subdued Malik Ambar, the Abyssinian, who had established himself on the ruins of the kingdom of Ahmadnagar. Goaded into rebellion by the intrigues of Nūr Jahān, he was driven from the Deccan to Bengal, and from there back again to the Deccan, where he submitted to his father in 1625. Ascended the throne in 1627. Exacted tribute from the kingdoms of Ahmadnagar, Bijapur and Golkonda, but was less successful in his campaigns on the north-west frontier. In 1657, his serious illness precipitated a conflict between his sons, which ended in the success of Aurangzeb, the removal of his brothers, and the deposition of Shāh Jahān, who passed the remaining years of his life in captivity at Agra. He died in 1666, the year of the great fire of London. The most magnificent of all the Moghul Emperors. Builder of the Tāj Mahall at Agra, the present city of Delhi (called after him Shāhjahānābād), with its fort and Jāmi' Masjīd, and the tomb of Jahāngīr at Lahore. Buried in the Tāj. European contemporaries—Charles I (1600—1649), Oliver Cromwell (1599—1658) and Mazarin (1602—1661).

This painting is attributed to Chatr Man, and dated the 1st year of the reign. The colours on this picture are only partly indicated. The Emperor is standing on a low throne overlooking a river, on the farther bank of which is what appears to be a walled garden, enclosing a tomb or mosque.

C. 102. ABUL FAZL.

Born 1551 A. D. Son of Shaikh Mubārak, a man of vast learning and broad views, and brother of Faizī, the poet laureate, who introduced him to Akbar's court. Akbar found, in his learning and acuteness, a weapon uniquely adapted for breaking the power of the orthodox Ūlamā at court. He took a leading part in the famous Thursday evening discussions, and ultimately persuaded Akbar to declare himself the spiritual guide of his people. The promulgation of the new religion, the Dīn-i-Ilāhī, or Divine Faith, followed. The Muhammadan prayers were abolished at court, and a new era was introduced. Abul Fazl spent five years in the Deccan and showed himself a capable soldier and administrator. He was murdered by Bir Singh Deo, chief of Orchha (see C. 105, Plate XIc), on his return, at the instigation of Prince Salīm (Jahāngīr), who justifies the act in his memoirs on the ground that Abul Fazl was an enemy of the Prophet. The date of the murder was 1602. Abul Fazl was the author of the Akbarnāmah and the Ain-i-Akbari, and he is regarded as the greatest Indian master of Persian prose. The picture is almost certainly not one of Abul Fazl. The sitting posture seems conclusive proof that the portrait is of some late celebrity, while the costume is comparatively modern, perhaps dating from the early 19th century.

The Emperor is in white with an orange sash. The boy is in green and attendant carries a crimson flywhisk. The mahōwat is in pale yellow. Bells are suspended from the haudah of the elephant. Manucci says, "all the elephants move with bells attached to their body, serving to warn passers-by and give them time to move and get out of the way; for when an elephant runs, or merely walks, he does not stop like a horse would." In front are attendants with a white hawk, matchlock and a sword in a crimson cover. Wild fowl are flying in the background.

C. 209. SHĀH ĀLAM, Moghul Emperor, 1759—1806 A. D.

Born 1728. Son of Ālamgīr II (see C. 207, Plate LVI. a). Had to fly for his life from Delhi in 1755 to escape the clutches of Ghāzī-ud-dīn. On the death of his father in 1759, he was recognized as successor, but did not return to his capital till 1771. In the meantime, the government was in the capable hands of Najib-ud-daulah, who died in 1770. The Emperor was engaged in the eastern provinces, and in 1765 ceded the Diwanship of Bengal, Behār and Orissa to the East India Company. For some years after that he kept a sorry court at Allahabad, and in 1771 returned to Delhi. He had with him a very efficient servant in Najaf Khan (see C. 214, Plate LXXIa), who conducted his affairs with considerable success until his death in 1782. The next twenty years was the period of Maratha supremacy, broken only, when Sindhia's control was relaxed, by the terrible episode of Ghulām Qādir's short-lived success. In 1788, he took possession of the palace. Enraged at the Emperor's denial of the existence of any buried treasure, he blinded him with his own dagger, but two months later was driven out by the Marathas, and put to death by slow torture. In 1803, the Maratha power at Delhi was broken by the victories of Lord Lake (see C. 260, Plate LXXIV7), and the administration of Shāh Ālam's territories passed to the British. He died in 1806, and was buried at the shrine of Qutb-ud-dīn at Mahrauli.

PLATE XLVI.

C. 164. AURANGZEB (Ālamgīr I., Moghul Emperor (1658—1707 A.D.).

Third son of Shāh Jahān (see C. 132, Plate XLIII) and Mumtāz Mahall. Born in 1618, he was appointed Governor of the Deccan in 1636. Transferred to Afghanistan in 1647, he commanded the disastrous expedition to Balkh, and made two unsuccessful attempts on Kandahar. He returned to the Deccan in 1655, and gained some easy successes against the kingdoms of Goleonda and Bijapur. In 1657, the serious illness of Shāh Jahān was the signal for an internecine struggle among his sons for the throne. Aurangzeb emerged triumphant, deposed his father, put to death his brothers Dārā Shikoh (see C. 35, Plate XXXI) and Murād Bakhsh, and drove the third brother Shujā' into Arakan, where he disappeared. The rise of the Maratha power under Sivāji (1627—1680) was meanwhile changing the face of affairs in the Deccan. Bijapur and Goleonda became his tributaries and the Moghul generals could make little head against him. Aurangzeb himself took the field in 1681, and during the last 26 years of his long life never once set foot in his capital. He conquered Goleonda (see C. 166, Plate XLIX) and Bijapur, but his operations against the Marathas were fruitless. He died at the age of 88 at Ahmadnagar, and was buried in a simple tomb at Khuldabad near Aurangabad. In spite of his courage, his untiring energy and his great ability, the commencement of the decline of the Moghul Empire must be dated from his reign, though its external magnificence survived until the sack of Delhi by Nādir Shāh in 1739. His failure has often been ascribed to his uncompromising zeal for his faith. There is a saying that Akbar planted out the seedling of empire, Jahāngīr watered it, Shāh Jahān enjoyed its fruit, and Aurangzeb uprooted it. He built the Motī Masjid (Pearl Mosque) in the Delhi Fort, and his letters in Persian are still regarded as models of elegance.

Contemporary events in England—the Civil Wars, the Commonwealth, the Restoration and the Revolution. In France Louis XIV reigned from 1643 to 1715.

An uncoloured jhillī tracing. The two people shown on the right, one of whom from his appearance seems to be a Rājput Chief, are proffering daggers to the Emperor, who is holding a book in his left hand (probably the Qurān). Across his knees lies his small sword, probably a Zafar-tukyah (see A. 178, Plate VIII b), while another larger sword lies beside him on the Jharān. Aurangzeb is often represented in a prayerful attitude and holding a Qurān. (Compare C. 156, Plate LII b.) For further pictures of Aurangzeb see C. 355 and 356, Plates L a and b, C. 160, Plate XLVII a, and C. 112, Plate XLVIII.

Showing the scarlet awnings and screens. The low balustrade between the outer row of columns has now disappeared, as has also the small marble projecting feature in the centre of the plinth. The kiosks are shown as gilded. The gilded copper of these was taken away and sold after the occupation of the Fort by the British in 1857.

C. 501. SHĀHBĀZ KHAN, KAMBO.

He passed part of his early life as a fauqār, but afterwards rendered distinguished military service to Akbar. He acquired enormous wealth, and it is said that no less than ten of his servants received a lakh of rupees apiece as their yearly salaries. He died in 1599 A. D.

The principal figure is attired in a cream robe, striped with gold. His turban is orange coloured. To the right, an attendant, wearing a cream flowered coat, bears a sword in a green cover. The man to the left is dressed in orange. The cushions are green and the balustrade red. A golden huqqah stands on the pavement which is adorned with pietra dura work.

C. 160. AURANGZEB (see note on C. 164, Plate XLVI), as a young man.

The oval background of the miniature is dark green: the red coat fur-edged: the turban pink, black and gold.

The multi-coloured "surround" of the picture is a most elaborate one.

C. 96. THE EMPEROR AKBAR AND BĪRBAL.

Akbar holding a hawk is seated under an umbrella, one of the emblems of sovereignty, while above are two birds of paradise, the birds of happy omen. The Emperor is attired in gray, and wears a pearl necklet and pearl-handled knife. Beside him is lying a short sabre, probably the zafar-lukyah (see A. 175, Plate VIII). Bīrbal, who stands behind the gold throne, is wearing green with a grey turban. Bīrbal was originally a poor minstrel, but his quick wit and ready tongue won Akbar's favour and affection. His sayings are still quoted. He was killed in the disastrous expedition to Swat in 1586.

C. 255c. ĀBDULLĀH KHĀN.

This picture seems more characteristic of the Sayyid King-maker than C. 45 (see Plate LI_a). Possibly that picture is wrongly described.

The picture is very vividly coloured. The coat is red, embroidered with gold flowers, the trousers are orange with green stripes, the shoes blue and yellow. The hilt of the sword is blue. The background of the picture is dark green.

PLATE XLVIII.

C. 162. AURANGZEB (see note on C. 164, Plate XLVI) as a prince.

Aurangzeb is wearing black chain armour, arm-pieces, breast-plate and helmet. The horse's trappings are of gold cloth, embroidered with flowers, and its head is covered with a black leather(?) head piece. The end of the horse's tail is dyed red. Behind are attendants, the first of them carrying a flywhisk made of peacock's feathers.

The attendant in the bottom left-hand corner of the picture carries a bag of coins, perhaps for distribution as bounty. In the distance in front of the horse are seen cavalry and artillery marching in line, while behind them are seen two hills, topped by Forts.

PLATE XLIX.

C. 166. THE SIEGE OF GOLCONDA BY AURANGZEB (see note on C. 164, Plate XLVI^a).

The Emperor is seated in a litter, reading the Qurān. One prisoner has just been beheaded, and an attendant holds the severed head in his hand. Another prisoner is standing before the Emperor. The ear-rings on the severed head, and those he is wearing are of the same pattern, which suggests what his fate will be.

Behind the Emperor stand a row of officers, among them a European. They are all watching the proceedings of the Emperor with interest.

To the right above the Emperor are the European mercenaries and their Indian officer, while there is another European standing in the group behind the Emperor. To the left of them are some cavalry, some of whom are wearing corslets of scale-armor. The European gunners are hard at work serving the guns, and an elephant is seen pushing a gun into position. On the left of picture stand elephants carrying the māḥi o marāḥib, the royal Insignia (see note on 'Standards and Insignia,' section II, page 27).

C. 356. AURANGZEB IN DARBAR.

In this picture, the Emperor is seen sitting in a raised recess at the back of a "Hall of Audience." To his right, is depicted Prince Bahādur Shāh (see C. 175, Plate LV^a, and C. 47, Plate LIII^b), his son and successor, and to the left Prince Āzam Shāh, his third son. In the middle, and standing on a raised dais in the act of presenting a petition to the Emperor, is Asad Khān, the Prime Minister. He was also Prime Minister in the reign of Bahādur Shāh I. The figure standing beside him on the dais is unnamed.

To the left are standing Nawāb Rohilla Khān, Khalīlullāh Khān and Sipahdār Khān; to the right the names of only two are given—Amīr Khān (the second), and Fatehāllāh Khān the last of the four.

In the outer enclosure Mahābat Khān (see C. 511, Plate XLIV^c), Rashīd Khān, Zabardast Khān and Mun'im Khān are standing on the right. The last man is not named. To the left are Ibrāhīm Khān, Zulfiqār Khān, and Sadullāh Khān. The last two are unnamed. Outside the railing are ushers and mace bearers. This picture, like No. C. 355 below, clearly shows the railing separating the different ranks of those attending the Darbar.

C. 355. The same.

At the top of the picture are seen attendants bearing the mūhī-q-murātīb (see note on Standards and Insignia, Section II, page 27). Two elephants bearing haudahs are seen on the left. The personages immediately in front of the Emperor are, two of them at least, strangers, as is evident from their features and different type of head-dress. Behind the Emperor are attendants bearing the panjaks (see A. 241, 248, Plate XII^b), trident (see A. 241, Plate XII^b), scales of justice and other symbolical insignia.

In the foreground are musicians, ushers with wands and chobdārs (mace-bearers).

This picture also shows the railing which separated the various ranks of those attending the Darbar.

C. 45. SAYYID ĀBDULLĀH KHĀN, QUTB-UL-MULK (also see C. 255*c*, Plate XLVII*d*).

One of the "King-maker" brothers, who overthrew Jahāndār Shāh (see C. 495*a*, Plate LVII), and set up in succession Farrukh-siyar (see C. 180, Plate LV*d*), Rafi'-ud-darajāt, Rafi'-ud-daulah and Muhammad Shāh (see C. 55, Plate XXIX b, C. 190, Plate LVIII a, and C. 197, Plate LIX). In the year following the accession of Muhammad Shāh, the younger brother, Husain Āli Khān, was assassinated. Ābdullāh revolted, and proclaimed yet another prince as Emperor, but was defeated and taken prisoner. He did not long survive his downfall, and died in 1723.

Born C. 1571 A.D. Son of Ītimād-ud-Daulah (see C. 151, Plate XLIII*a*), brother of Nūr Jahān, the wife of Jahāngīr, and father of Muntāz Maḥall, the lady of the Tāj. Prime Minister of Jahāngīr and Shāh Jahān. His tomb is at Shāhdara near Lahore. A Persian by birth and a man of great culture. Died 1641. European contemporaries—Ben Jonson (1573—1637), and Cardinal Richelieu (1585—1642).

The gold coat is embroidered with tulips. The sash is of white and gold. The trousers are striped orange and gold; the shoes black. An orange handkerchief is suspended from the breast. The dagger is jewel-hilted with a red sheath.

PLATE LII.

C. 525. ĀLI MARDĀN KHĀN.

A Kurd by birth. Succeeded his father as Governor of Kandahar, then a Persian possession, in 1625 A.D. In 1637, he made it over to the Moghuls, and entered the service of Shāh Jahān. Honours were showered on him. He was made Governor of Kashmir, and afterwards of the Punjab as well. Later he was sent to Kābul, and saw a good deal of fighting in Afghanistan. Died in 1657 and was buried at Lahore. In 1639, when he was Governor of the Punjab, a canal was constructed from the point where the Ravi issues from the mountains, to Lahore, a distance of 100 miles, and in the following year, he undertook the laying out of the famous gardens of Shālamār near Lahore. The canal by which water was brought into the Fort at Delhi is attributed to him, and he is said to have introduced into Indian architecture the bulbous "Tartar" dome, of which examples may be seen in the Jāmi' Masjid at Delhi and the Taj at Agra.

Vizier of Shāh Jahān, "the most able and upright minister that ever appeared in India." (Elphinstone). Died in 1656 A.D.

C. 526. DĀRĀB KHĀN.

Son of Mirzā Ābd-ur-Rahīm Khān, Khān Khānān (C. 101, Plate XLb). Joined Shāh Jahān in his rebellion, and was captured and beheaded. His head was sent in a cloth to his father by Mahābat Khān (see C. 511, Plate XLIVc), as "a present of a melon." He was put to death in 1625 A.D.

C. 246*k*. BEDĀR BAKHT.

Son of Ahmad Shāh (see C. 201, Plate LVIII*b*), was set up as Emperor by Ghulām Qādir in 1788 A.D., but after his fall was seized and put to death by order of Shāh Ālam. The picture is that of a boy, but the verse at the top seems to have been written while he was actually on the throne, some years after the picture was painted.

The picture is a good one considering its late date.

(b)

C. 255*b*. FAZL-ULLĀH KHĀN, son of Siyādat Khān.

Lived in the time of Shāh Jahān and Aurangzeb.

The turban is gold. The sword belt and straps red and the sash of gold, embroidered with a red tulip.

(c)

C. 217. AHMAD SHĀH DURRĀNĪ (C. 1722—1773 A.D.).

An Afghān chief, who rose to high office under Nādir Shāh (see C. 54, Plate XXXIII*a*), on whose assassination, in 1747, he was proclaimed king at Kandahar. He invaded India several times, annexed the Punjab as far as Sirhind, and in 1756 sacked Delhi. In 1761, he defeated the Maratha confederacy at Pānipat in one of the most decisive battles ever fought on Indian soil. European contemporaries—Frederic the Great (1712—1786) and the Young Pretender (1720—1788).

Next to him is Samsām-ud-daulah, Khān Daurān Khān, who was mortally wounded at the battle of Karnāl in 1739, when Nādir Shāh (see C. 51, Plate XXXIII*a*) defeated the Delhi forces under Muhammad Shāh. Next to him and rather behind is Āzīm-ullāh Khān, and in front of him stands Itīmād-ud-daulah, the vizier, better known as Qamr-ud-dīn Khān (see C. 58, Plate XXVIII*b*), who was present at the battle of Karnāl, and was killed by a cannon-ball when praying in his tent during the successful action fought at Sirhind by Prince Ahmad Shāh against Ahmad Shāh Durrānī (see C. 217, Plate LIV*c*), in 1718. Beyond him is Nizām-ul-mulk, the founder of the Hyderabad State (ob. 1718), who also was present at the battle of Karnāl. On the right the lowest figure is that of Zafar Khān, better known as Roshan-ud-daulah. Above him is Burhān-ul-mulk, better known as Saʿadat Khān, the Governor of Oudh and ancestor of the Nawābs and Kings of that province, who fought at Karnāl and died the day before Nādir Shāh's massacre at Delhi in 1739. The furthest up the picture on the right is Muzaffar Khān. Like his brother, Samsām-ud-daulah, he was killed at the battle of Karnāl.

C. 231. MIRZĀ JAWĀN BAKHT.

Favourite son of Zinat Mahall and Bahādur Shāh II, who did their best to get him recognized as Heir-Apparent. He was a mere boy at the time of the Mutiny, and shared his father's exile to Rangoon, where he died in 1854.

European influence is strongly marked in this picture. The colours are only faintly indicated.

PLATE LXIII.

C. 154. BHĪM KAUR.

A member of the Udaipur family, and a faithful adherent of Prince Khurram (Shāh Jahān). On the picture is written what appears to be a quotation of something said or written by Shāh Jahān.

"The best of my servants, while I was Prince, were Mahārajah Bhīm and Rājah Bikramājī. They both died in my service."

The picture, which is attributed to Nanha, is unfinished.

Lent by L. Bulāki Das, of Delhi.

(b)

C. 175. LĀL KAUR.

Mistress of Jahandār Shah (see C. 495*a*, Plate LVII). Originally a dancing-girl, she gained great influence with the Emperor, and caused great scandal at Delhi by her conduct.

Lent by M. Muhammad Hāmid, of Delhi.

(c)

C. 253. HINDŪ RĀO.

Hindū Rāo was the brother of Baiza Bai, the wife of Daulat Rāo Sindhia of Gwalior. He died in 1855. His house on the Ridge, which had previously belonged to Mr. William Fraser (see C. 252, Plate LXII*b*), is well-known in connexion with the siege of Delhi in 1857.

C. 254. A NAUTCH PARTY AT HINDŪ RĀO'S HOUSE.

Hindū Rāo (see C. 253, Plate LXIIIc) was popular with the British residents of Delhi, and this picture contains portraits of several British officers. One of them is smoking a huqqah, and his huqqah-bearer, whose business it was to prepare the huqqah for smoking, is standing behind him. In the old days, Englishmen used to take their huqqahs with them, even to dances. It was a deadly insult to step over another man's huqqah-snake, and it is said that more duels arose from incidents of this kind than from any other cause.

C. 410. BELFRY.

This is said to have stood formerly in the Chāndnī Chauk, Delhi. The bastard style of architecture, in which it was built, was popular during the times of Akbar II and Bahādur Shāh II.

The Moghul Kotwālī is still used as the central police station of the city. The mosque was built in 1721, and it was from the platform in front of it that Nādir Shah watched the massacre (see note on C. 54, Plate XXXIIa).

C. 397. SALIMGARH, THE FORT and THE NIGAMBOD GHĀT.

The view shows the old bridge, constructed by Jahāngīr between Salimgarh and the Main Land, and which was removed to make way for the new railway bridge. The marble slab, recording the construction of this bridge by Jahāngīr in 1031 A.H. (1621 A.D.), is now in the Delhi Museum of Archæology.

PLATE LXVI.

C. 422. THE RIVER FRONT OF THE QUDSIYAH GARDEN PALACE.

The picture is one from "Daniell's Oriental Scenery." It bears the date 1795. Thus, Daniell, R.A., F.R.S., was in India from 1784 to 1794. This façade has now disappeared, although the garden remains. The mediocre quality of the late Moghul Architecture, of which this palace is an example, is in marked contrast with the earlier work in the Fort.

The palace was built by Qudsiyah Begam, the dancing girl who became the wife of Muhammad Shāh (see C. 55, Plate XXIX b), and the mother of Ahmad Shāh (1748—1754) (C. 201, Plate LVIII b). On the deposition of her son, both he and she were blinded by order of Ghāzī-ud-dīn Khān.

C. 290. THE VIRGIN MARY WITH MINISTERING ANGELS.

A night scene. The Virgin Mary is seated on a rock beside a fire. Near her is a book and a lighted candle. Angels are offering wine and food. In the distance there appears to be the shrine of some holy man or friar to whom other angels are making offerings.

Christian subjects were not uncommon in the time of Jahāngīr.

Governor-General of India (1842—1844). Withdrew from Afghanistan and annexed Sind. Recalled on account of differences with the Directors.

C. 258. LIEUTENANT-COLONEL JAMES SKINNER, C.B.

Born in 1778 A.D., the son of a Scotch officer in the Company's service, and a Rājputnī captive. In 1796, he entered the service of Sindhia just before the retirement of de Boigne, and saw a good deal of fighting, but was dismissed along with the other officers of British descent on the outbreak of war with the Company in 1803. Took service under Lake on condition that he should not be employed against his old master, and was given the command of a body of Perron's horse, which had come over after the battle of Delhi. Accompanied Lake in his pursuit of Holkar to the Beas in 1805. At the close of the war, his corps was disbanded, but in 1809 he was again employed in the settlement of Hariāna. For the Gurkha and Pindāri wars (1814—1817), the strength of his corps was raised to 3,000 men. In 1826, he served with distinction at the siege and storming of Bharatpur, and in 1831 was summoned with his regiment to the meeting between Maharajah Ranjit Singh, of Lahore, and the Governor-General (Lord W. Bentinck) at Rupar. In 1828, he had received the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in His Majesty's service and had been made a C.B. He lived mostly at Hānsi, which was the headquarters of his corps, but he had a fine house inside the Kashmir Gate at Delhi. He died at Hānsi in December 1841, and his body was brought to Delhi to be buried in St. James' Church, which he had built in fulfilment of a vow made when lying desperately wounded on the battle-field of Uniyāra. It was said of his funeral that none of the Emperors was ever brought into Delhi in such state as "Sikandar Sahib." The present representatives of his corps are the 1st D. Y. O. Lancers (Skinner's Horse) and the 3rd Skinner's Horse.

Appointed Resident at Delhi in 1803. Victor in the Gurkha campaign of 1814—1816. Resident at Delhi again in 1822. His action in regard to Bharatpur disapproved by Lord Amherst, who superseded him in favour of Metcalfe in 1825. Died, heart-broken at his supersession, in July 1825. A great figure in northern India.

C. 268. LORD GOUGH (1779—1869).

Served in the Peninsula and China. Commander-in-Chief in India 1843—1849. Was in command throughout the Sikh Wars. "Said to have commanded in more general actions than any British officer in the century, the Duke of Wellington excepted."

(b)

C. 265. SIR HENRY FANE (1778—1840).

Commander-in-Chief in India (1835—1839). Objected strongly to the first Afghān war, and resigned his appointment. Died on the voyage home.

C. 256. GEORGE THOMAS.

A Tipperary sailor, born in 1756 A.D. Landed at Madras about 1781. After serving various chiefs in southern India, in 1787 he came north, and took service with the Begam Samru (C. 217, Plate LXI*a*). He left her in 1792, and after six years of active service under Appa Khandi Rāo, a Maratha leader, in the country north and west of Delhi, he conquered Hariāna and established himself as an independent chief at Hānsi. Fought with varying success against Jaipur, Bikanir, Jind, Patiala and Udaipur, carried his arms as far as the Sutlej, and offered to conquer the whole of the Punjab for the British. His power excited the apprehensions of Perron, who held Delhi and the Doab as Sindhia's lieutenant, and after some fruitless negotiations a strong body of Perron's troops under Bourquin advanced into Thomas' territory. After some initial successes, Thomas plunged into a long debauch, and allowed himself to be surrounded. Many of his troops deserted him, and his provisions failed, but he cut his way through the enemy at the head of 300 men, and made his escape to Hānsi (see note on A. 288, Plate XXIV*c*) where, after a gallant defence, he capitulated in December 1801. He died in the following August and was buried at Berhampore in Bengal. His memoirs were published after his death.

C. 214. MIRZĀ NAJAF KHĀN.

A Persian who claimed descent from the Safavī kings. Joined Shāh Alam at Allahabad about 1760. Returned to Delhi with him in 1771, and managed affairs with success till his death in 1782. With him perished the last hope of the Moghul Empire. He is buried near the tomb of Safdar Jang, a few miles south of Delhi.

This painting only too unmistakably shows that, with the decline of the empire, the quality of its art likewise suffered. There is a lack of that refinement and delicacy about the later work which are the chief characteristics of the earlier paintings. The colours, too, are cruder, and the pictures of this date are apt to be on the whole larger and evidently less laboriously executed.

C. 317. A GROUP OF BRITISH OFFICERS.

"Picture of the Sahibs of the Council" is written in the middle of the picture, and on the back is "Warren Hastings Bahādur Viceroy of India." The central figure is not Warren Hastings. Possibly it is a picture of Lord Hastings (Governor-General, 1813—1823), and some officers of his time.

The first three, and the last but one, are wearing red coats, the other two wearing blue ones. In the background is a lake or river over which boats are crossing, while to the left is what looks like a church tower, built in the European style.

C. 335. AN ELEPHANT FIGHT.

Elephant fights were a favourite pastime of the Moghul Emperors.

In the picture the low wall is seen, which was used to separate the fighting elephants. Attendants with fireworks, which were used to separate the animals when they had become unmanageable, are also shown (also refer C 54, Plate XXXIII c). On the walls in the background are shown spectators enjoying the fight.

C. 260. LORD LAKE (Viscount Lake of Delhi and Laswāri).

Born 1744, and entered the Guards at the age of 14. Served in Germany, America and Flanders, and commanded the troops in Ireland during the early part of the rebellion of 1798, where he was a good deal criticized for over-severity and under-discipline. Came out to India in 1801 as Commander-in-Chief, and it was here that he made his name by his campaigns against the Marathas and their final overthrow in northern India. The campaign against Sindhia in 1803 was largely inspired by Wellesley's desire to destroy "the French State erected by M. Perron on the banks of the Jamna." M. Perron was a French adventurer, who had succeeded the great de Boigne in the command of Sindhia's regular forces, and held the Doāb with his head-quarters at Aligarh, practically as an independent chief, with an added prestige from his possession of the person of the Emperor, Shāh Alam (see note on C. 209, Plate XLIV*d*). He was known to be in communication with Buonaparte and Wellesley determined to remove him. He gave himself up after his defeat at Aligarh. Bourquin assumed command, but on the 11th September 1803, he was defeated by Lake at the battle of Delhi, which was fought on the plain opposite Humayun's tomb. The crowning victory was at Laswāri on the 1st November. After peace had been made with Sindhia, Holkar, the Maratha Chief of Indore declared war, and was joined by the chief of Bharatpur. Lake stormed Dīg, but failed in four assaults on Bharatpur. The Raja, however, sued for terms rather than risk another attack. Holkar made a wild dash for the Punjab in the hope of aid from Ranjit Singh, but was brought to terms on the banks of the Beās. Lake received a peerage in 1804, and died in 1808.
